

AbbyMarie Leibrand

Assistant Professor

D.P.T. – Temple University

M.S. – Sacred Heart University

B.S. – Sacred Heart University

Dr. Abby Liebrand has been serving patients in the clinic as a physical therapist for more than 10 years and now also serves as a director of clinical education at Neumann University. She has previously treated in pediatrics and holds a certifications as a Brian Injury Specialist and in vestibular rehabilitation, and is a child passenger safety technician. She is also an active member of the APTA and has previously held the office of Director of Research for the aquatics section. Prior to beginning full time as a faculty member in Neumann University's physical therapy program, she had been involved in teaching in several area physical therapy schools. Her areas of research interest include burn garments, torticollis, plagiocephaly, Williams syndrome, Ehlers-Danlos Syndrome and joint laxity, and rehabilitation length of stay.